

A boy from a poor, rural family in Tanzania went with his father to town for the first time.

While there, the boy saw people dressed in clean shirts and colorful dresses.

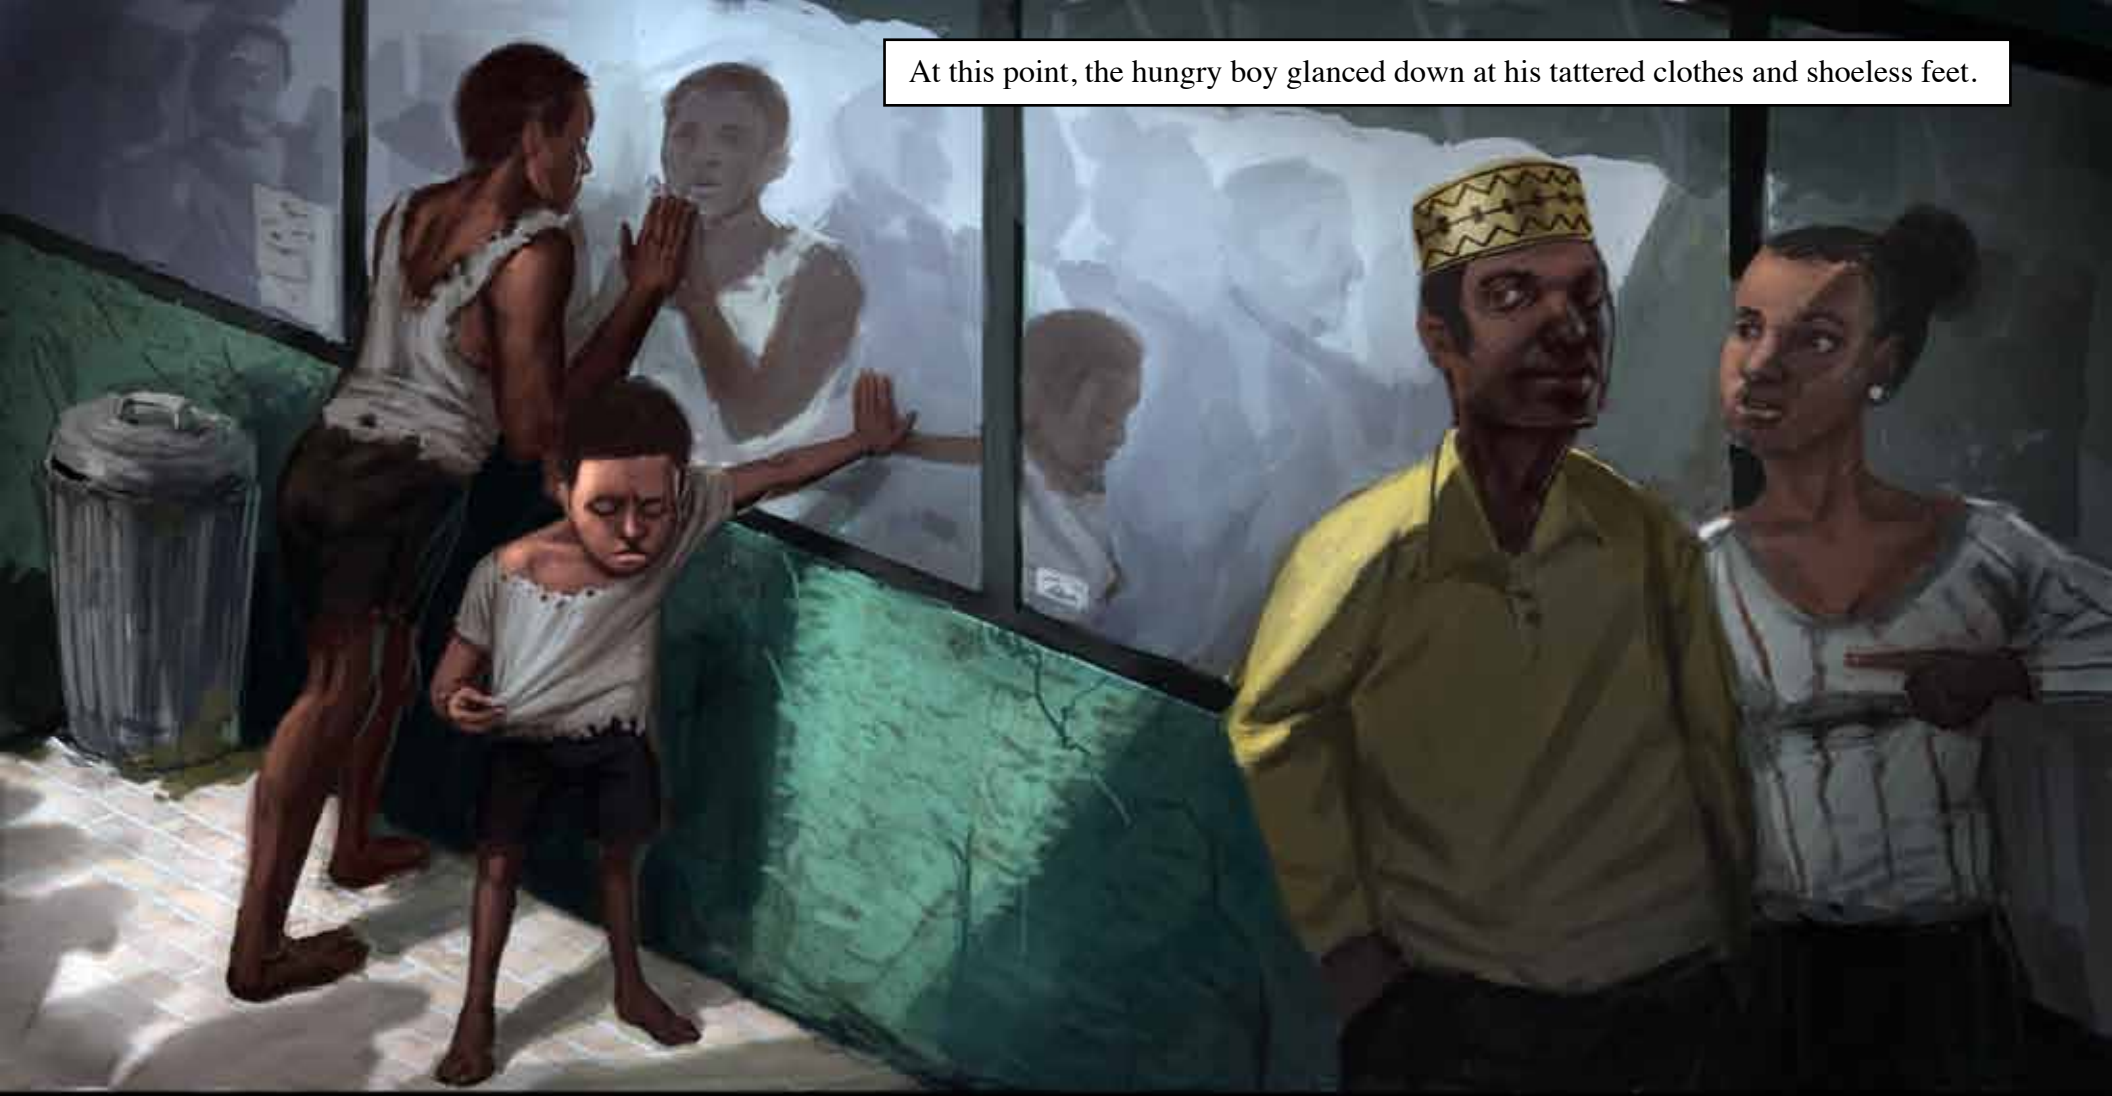

He also saw some of the city folk driving beautiful cars.

When the boy and his father passed by a restaurant, they encountered the wonderful aroma of cooking food. Looking through the glass window, they saw people seated, enjoying their meals.

At this point, the hungry boy glanced down at his tattered clothes and shoeless feet.

Then, looking straight up into his father's eyes, he asked:

Daddy, are we people too?
